SO IN LOVE

Sara, Amiee, Milly and Roxy

Sara (right): "Dogs have a vocal of 100 words, but Milly's is almost entirely taken up by her nicknames: we call her the Müllerer, Shmelly, Shmellon, Shmiller, MillyMüller, Milly Mooman, Melle and Moulman."

It's great having her and Roxy in the office with us. They're wonderful friends. You can never get too stressed when they're around. Milly understands everything you're feeling. When you're ill, she comes over and lies on you. She's just wonderful. And so pretty. She is an extremely beautiful little pug. I love to say.

She's also the most spoiled dog in the world. She insists on being carried around like a baby. In fact, that's what she thinks she is: a baby. There's really nothing doggy about her at all."

Amiee: "Roxy's a funny little thing. I fell in love with her the moment I saw her. I always say she looks a bit like a cat - although my mum thinks she looks like Diana Ross. People assume that she and Milly are the same breed, because they're both so little, but Roxy's meant to be bigger. She just turned out stunted."

She's with me all the time. French bulldogs are very independent, and she can be a bit standoffish, but she gets upset if I don't go to her. I know when she's in a mood. She's like a child, and I treat her like one. We'd do anything for the dogs. They're part of the family, they really are."
